PAVING THE WAY TO A RESTORATIVE FUTURE

What do we mean by evidence-based practice?

Evidence-based practice means using the best available evidence to understand and inform policy, practice, and decisions.

Sometimes described as.....

A 'What works' approach

The opportunity to ...

Provide evidence for ‘what works’

Help us make sure we ‘do no harm’

Better direct resources

Make the case for expanding the field

Workstream 4: The commissioning, collection, and dissemination of evidence-based research in Restorative Justice and Restorative Practice & the benefits of a national reporting framework

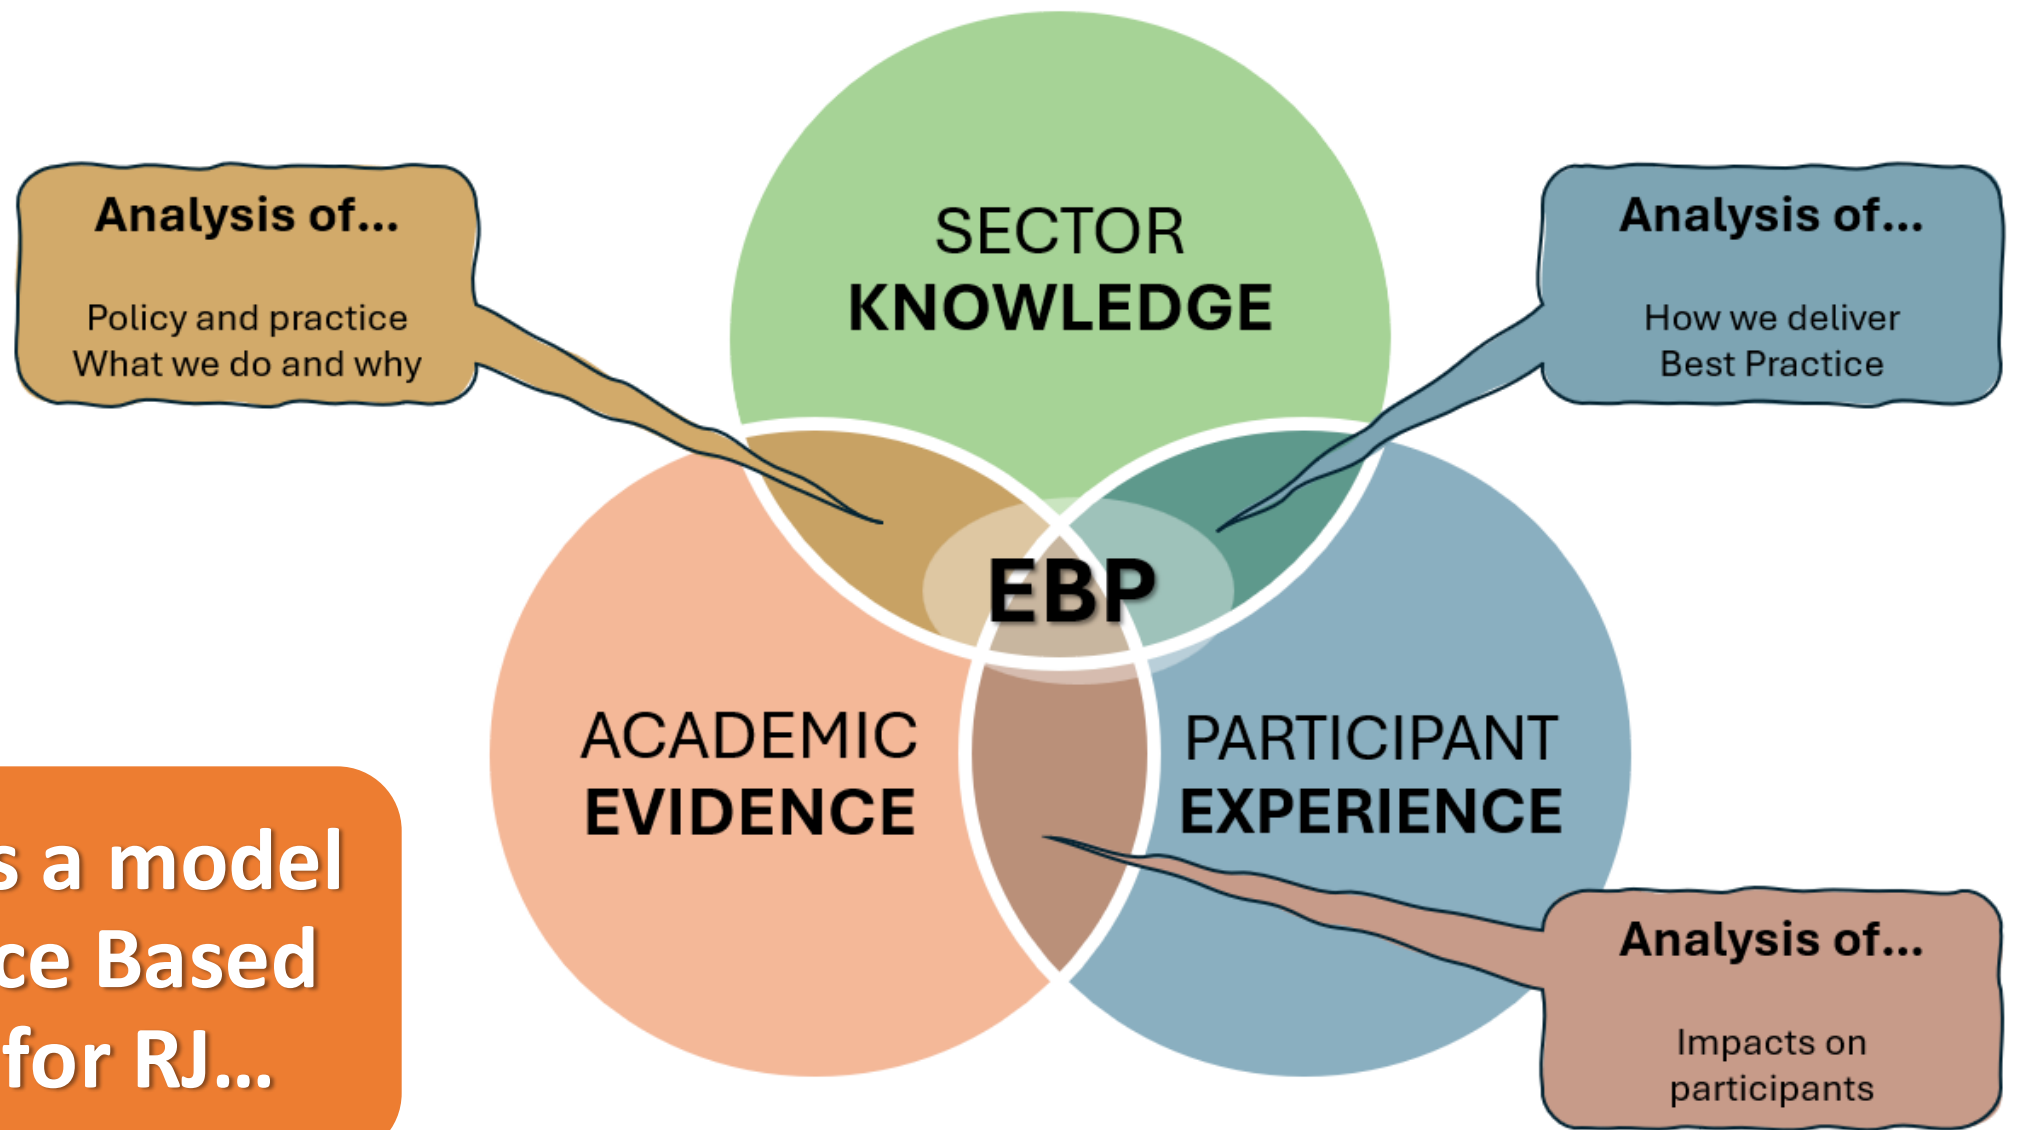

See: <https://rjappg.co.uk/briefing-papers/>

3. To embed evidencing of success across commissioning and reporting for services

As part of developing greater visibility and sharing of evidence-based work, and of developing a National Reporting Framework, there is a significant opportunity to establish a series of success-markers for restorative work. This will allow for the greater evidencing of success across both interpersonal and system-wide indicators. A centralised national repository for case studies, service evaluations, and peer-reviewed research will enable the sector to promote evidence of success in restorative practices.
